

Pedestrian signage to North London Line and West London Line stations

Foreword

The North London Line is a vital rail route for Londoners. Some sections are overcrowded and clearly well known to passengers, but others are less well used and the stations hidden in back streets. There will be potential passengers unaware of journey opportunities they can make.

Now that the Mayor has greater responsibility for the line and the concession announced London TravelWatch believes it's time to promote the line and let people know where the stations are with some limited additional signing and some improvements to the existing signage.

This report suggests a few signage sites and some other proposals to do that. We hope it makes a contribution to the line's future success.

Brian Cooke
Chairman, London TravelWatch